Students are ahead of their time in learning a new language

Speaking of the future

By Kerry Jackson
Staff Writer

Sixty Chestnut Log Middle School students are doing something no other students in the nation are doing — they are learning an international language of the future.

Called Glosa, the language was developed in the 1940s by a math professor who noticed the potential for the language. Though its vocabulary is voluminous, its heart consists of 1,000 words that can be mastered in a few days.

"I find it very simple," said Klaus Langkilde, who teaches five Glosa classes at Chestnut Log Middle.

One would expect him to easily master the language, though. After all, when he finished school in his native Denmark 20 years ago he was able to speak five languages.

But the beautiful simplicity of the language was evident in one of Langkilde's classes Thursday.

"This fellow, today was his first day," said Langkilde, pointing to a new student, "and he had his hand up several times in class.

"It impressed me. It makes me think, 'Hey, it works.'"

Langkilde began teaching Glosa last year to sixth-grade gifted students. This year, he has three seventh-grade (second year) classes and two classes of beginners in the sixth-grade, all students from the school's gifted program.

"They are ahead of their time, that's for sure," Langkilde said of his students.

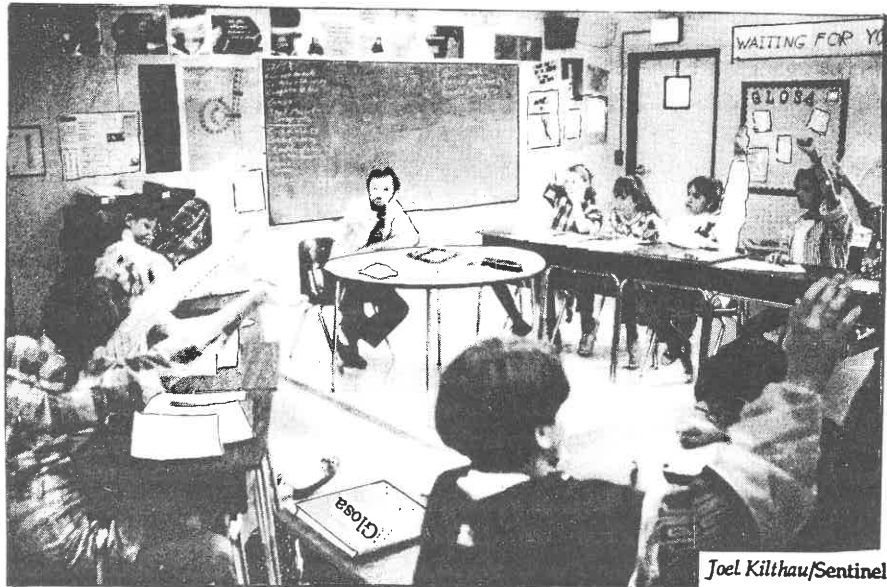

Since it is only about a half-century old, Glosa is a baby language. Currently, it is not being taught extensively outside of China and Africa, said Langkilde.

"Here in the United States, as far as we know, this (Chestnut Log Middle) is the only place" it is being taught, he said.

Langkilde is not alone in his view that Glosa is easy to master. Literature on the language claims it "is the easiest and most accurate language you will ever come across."

Familiarity is one reason behind the claim. All Glosa words are from Latin and ancient Greek, languages that have had far-reaching impacts on many modern languages, including, surprisingly enough, Japanese.

It is so familiar that much of Glosa can be interpreted into English without a problem. Mi pa visita u teatra. If that sounds like, "I visited the theater," that's because that's what it means.

Christine Powell, Catherine Singleton and Hillary Bowlick are three of 60 students in the class that is made up of students from the gifted program at the school.

Many Glosa words often look exactly like their English counterparts, except for minor spelling differences.

Another appealing feature of Glosa is its lack of what other languages consider grammar. Instead, about 20 words are used to express plurals and tenses.

"Initially, the students like to use English grammar. They want to translate straight from one language to the other," said Langkilde. "But they pretty soon find out this (Glosa) is much easier. I don't even have to point it out to them."

And it will also help them in college when they sit down to learn a foreign language. Traveling internationally could be greatly eased as well.

"Let's say they go abroad. They would be able to communicate with the French, Spanish, Italian, anybody in Europe," said Langkilde.

Advocates of Glosa believe the new language will eventually spread internationally at some point and maybe even become the official language for international agencies such as the United Nations.

"I sincerely believe so," he said. "It was introduced to the European Parliament a few weeks ago. They now spend 50 percent of their budget translating their material to other languages. If they could use one language, they could save a tremendous amount of money. So they can see the benefit of this."

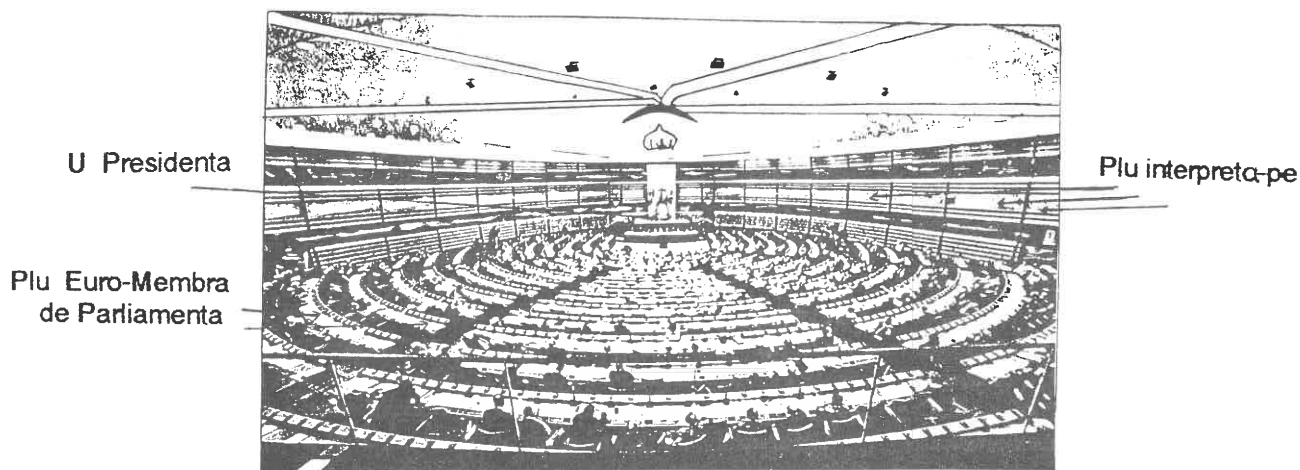

He also expects it to spread in education "once students and teachers hear more about it."

Langkilde comfortably teaches Glosa to an enthusiastic group of students at Chestnut Log. They are "hyperactive, but it's all about learning," he said, and that is enough to make Langkilde's job an enjoyable task. When he asks for Glosa translations of English phrases, he gets the reaction all teachers want from their students: hands shoot skyward, mouths open, emitting long oooohhs, and feet begin to tap under desks.

"I'm fortunate to have these students. They are so eager to learn," he said proudly before adding, "I think it's great because I learn from it myself."

LEXI-LALI

Two Greek words which have been much in the news lately are BULIMIA, ravenous hunger; and ANOREXIA, no-appetite.

BU is G rt for swelling, huge; and LIMIA, hunger.

BU also occurs in BOUS, ox, in E. Bull and Bull

E. also has from the same root BUCOLIC, of shepherds and herdsmen, hence BUCOLIC poetry.

BU KEPHALOS the bull-headed one, was the name of Alexander's horse.

The same BU occurs in Glosa BUNA, a mound, mountain.

Certain mammals which have conical cusps on their molar teeth are referred to as BUN-ODONTS.

The AN in AN-OREXIA means simply not, without, and is cognate with Germanic UN-.

It occurs in many technical terms ;

A-GNOSTIC, un-KNOWing. AN-ARCHY, without law.

AN-EMIA, without blood; A-MORAL, without morals.

Greek BU, LIMI and OREXI all occur in Mega Glosa, but we couldn't use AN, without, by itself as we have NE and NO-. No harm in using it in international technical terms obviously.

PRIVILEGI, a privilege, a right. This word we have inherited from Hogben's Interglossa. But as you know we like to use brief words of one or two syllables for the Glosa 1000 Vocabulary. Three and four syllables are alright for Mega-Glosa.

For privilege I suggest L. LICE, to be allowed to do something; to be allowed a liberty. LICE without the final euphonic vowel is monosyllabic and easy to pronounce. Glosa derivatives are;

NO-LICE outcast, disfranchised

PLU LICE DE HOMI the rights of man.

U LICE MANIFESTO declaration of rights.

LICE comes from L. LIC-ere, to be allowed,

LICenced, driving LICEnce.

ANTI, against, hostile towards, can easily do for oppose

KONTRA can also mean to oppose as in contra-dict.

Similarly we can ANA or 'up' somebody or something, and we can produce the opposite effect by KATA or downing them.

An attractive brief rt which occurs in a number of Glosa roots is ARI, to fit together. It occurs also in many Euro-words. Ex. ARm, which consists of some well-fitted bones; ARt which consists in fitting together, arranging various elements.

An important derivative is ARI-thmetic. G for number the fitting together, arranging of numbers. Other derivatives are AR ticular L for joint, an AR-ticle; and G. AR-thri, joint as in AR-thritis, inflammation of joints.

Another good G. word with same rt is HAR-mony, a fitting together. Also in many modern G. words.

ATTENDE is Glosa for to wait, but I prefer RESTA, literally to STANd back RE. Even just STA, to STANd would suffice, a mono syllable.

For a partner we have ASOCIA, somebody with whom one is asSOCIAted. The prefixed A- doesn't give any important information so why not just use SOCI

SOCI is cognate with L. SEQL, to follow, as partners follow each other.

Another interesting G. rt is BRIO, swell, full to bursting, as a river teeming with life, to burst out of ground as a spring. BRYO-logy is the study of mosses, which teem out of the ground and swell to a cushion. And of course em-BRYO.

L. CIRKULATI for circulating trafficeis alright, but the modern G. is briefer....KINESI fr KINE to move as in KINEma, moving pictures, and KINEtic energy, the energy in moving things.

For to show, point to we have L. MONSTRA as in deMONSTRate, or, briefer, G. DEIKA, show point to with which is connected G. DAK-TIL, finger, as in PTERO-DACTYL winged fingers. G. DEIKA show is cognate with German ZEIG, show and E. TEACH. G. DAKTI, teach. The Date fruit also comes from G. DAKTYL, finger, as the fruit is long and finger shaped. As usual the French kindly shortened it to DATE. The rt is also in L. indICate, point to.

DIS-SIPA-te, to scatter, throw in various directions, waste.

We can define the rt SIPA to mean throw, throw away, waste. And we can dispense with prefix DIS-, in all directions.

ENCONTRA, to meet has 3 syllables. Meet has the idea of coming together with, to 'with' somebody. L. for with is CON, or CO before a consonant. Surely in Glosa which recognizes no parts of speech, we can KO somebody, be with them.
